Presidents Update

Hornets,

Congratulations to most of our students on finishing Mid-term season, and for those of us that still are in it, I am confident that you too will get through this! This month has been incredibly busy for ASI and our Board of Directors, as not only have we been working diligently on getting the vote out for the upcoming election, but also on the rest of our strategic priorities. We have already finished many, and I have been hard at work on mine. This work has included gathering information regarding the University Police Budget and policies, information regarding the campus COA policies, planning meetings with campus admin, and working to get accessible voter information to our students. We have also been engaged with discussions regarding the implementation of the new ethnic studies requirement, evaluations for professors, and other system level discussions.

Looking back to the election, as of the time of writing this, it is the morning of the election and any outcome is still possible. Though we may know the winner of many races, including president, by 2:00pm tomorrow, there is a high likelihood that there will be a great deal of uncertainty no matter what. It is impossible to predict what the next few weeks could have in store, but I want to assure you that your ASI student government will continue to fight for our students no matter what. Regardless of the results, or the conditions and circumstances that follow, ASI will be active in ensuring that your student voice is represented. Please do not hesitate to reach out to myself in the following days or weeks, as I am here to represent our students, regardless of political or ideological results. My office hours are completely open, and feel free to drop by, even if just to talk. Stay strong Hornets, you are dealing with an unprecedented year, and your ability to persevere speaks volumes about your character, dedication, and future success in life.

- Noah
