A Message to my Constituents

Hornets,

It is an honor to represent the students of Sacramento State and within the College of Health and Human Services. I hope that this report finds you safe and healthy as we continue to transition back to campus. This past year was without a doubt an arduous and uncertain time for many of our students, and yet we persevered. I am deeply inspired by the resilience of our students who have lost loved ones as well as dealt with financial and basic needs insecurities due to COVID-19. I am truly here to assist and represent you all.

Since being sworn into office, I have been meeting with campus partners to bring students more professional development opportunities, basic needs resources, and to overall strengthen Sacramento State's involvement in the community. After a year away from campus, as well as entering my final year as a hornet, I hope to provide more opportunities and resources to students than ever before. While many students are still pursuing their careers from an online environment, many of Sac State's resources are open and fully operational to our students. A few I would like to highlight are the Student Health and Counseling Services, the ASI Food pantry, and the Crisis Assistance & Resource Education Support (CARES) office. These programs offer medical, nutritional, and financial resources to the students of our campus.
