Executive Director

Moving to the 2021-22 academic year is something that I know many of us are greatly looking forward to. The 2020-21 year brought with it many challenges that we had to overcome, and with that, we saw the dedication and perseverance that not only our employees at ASI demonstrated but also the student body.

Not only did our Academic Year begin months into the COVID-19 Pandemic, but within the first week, we experienced the demonstrations around the country of those asking for justice following the murder of George Floyd. The task before ASI was not only to ensure that our student body could still succeed through the COVID-19 pandemic, but also to lead and support anti-racism initiatives to make our campus an anti-racist institution. ASI also led incredibly successful voter registration and civic engagement initiative for the 2020 General Election, registering the third most students of all universities in California.

While our ASI Food Pantry remained open for the entirety of the pandemic, all our other departments and programs at ASI had to go through the reopening process this academic year. Staff at each department worked diligently to create re-opening plans and adapted programming to ensure that it complied with COVID-19 Health and Safety guidelines. The ASI Children's Center, Aquatic Center and ASI Peak Adventures reopened their doors at the end of the summer in 2020.

Although this year was unlike any prior, I am incredibly proud of the work that ASI has done. Our employees' dedication to serving the students never wavered, and our students at Sacramento State achieved despite the circumstances. Thank you all for the work that you have done and as always,

Stingers Up!

Student Staff Testimonial

"I have had the great honor of working at the ASI Children's Center for 3 years during my Undergrad at Sacramento State. I began working there at the start of my first semester at Sac State as a transfer student because I knew I was going to pursue teaching in elementary school. The work environment was unlike any job I had ever had. The people working at this center, at all levels, had an energy of purpose and genuine happiness. It was not soon after that I gleaned my own sense of purpose from working this job as well. I learned the role this center plays on the campus at Sac State, not only to serve families who are finishing their various degrees, but the role it plays in preparing future teachers like myself for the field of education."

there was lots of variety. I’ve enjoyed having nutritious food and I’m most grateful for the Tide detergent! Shout out to the school and the amazing donors, some of us students don’t have folks to go home to and get the basics from so it’s really nice to have strangers who care provide that type of support! Y’all are amazing.”
